BROADEN YOUR HORIZONS

AND THEN CHART YOUR OWN COURSE

Even before he graduates, Andrew Vercaigne is growing a network to benefit his career. A volunteer ambassador for the Faculty of Agricultural and Food Sciences, he gains valuable insight from industry partners: What are they looking for? What's exciting in the field today? He's also forging friendships with other students at faculty events as they navigate this evolving profession.

"My advice to students starting university would be to get involved! There are so many great opportunities to meet new people. I have met some of my best friends by getting involved in student groups and participating in faculty events. The people you meet become relationships that you will embrace for the rest of your life and the experiences you have with those friends will teach you even more."

FIND YOUR VOICE AND THEN EMPOWER OTHERS

Fifth-year Science student Kirsten Fleury found a supportive community on campus by getting involved as a student researcher and joining student groups. The female co-president of the Metis University Students Association, she is also an aspiring family physician set on breaking down social inequalities in health care. She realized how important it is to put her own well-being first, having faced difficulties with mental health.

"I struggled with balancing the stress of life, school and health. It's important that as students we learn it's okay to not be okay. Reaching out for help, and getting involved in my culture were the best decisions I made. I'm thriving this year, now that I've learned new coping skills, management tools and have the support of the Indigenous community."

FIND YOUR FOCUS

AND THEN CREATE POSITIVE CHANGE

During her fieldwork placement at St. Boniface Hospital, Saranjit Dhaliwal put theory into practice, learning how to best care for the mental health of geriatric patients. She wants to enhance a patient's well-being on many levels—from physical to cognitive to spiritual. Saranjit hopes to work with diverse communities, raising awareness about how recreation improves quality of life—and should be available to all.

"Playing sports has always been a big part of my life but I know the same opportunities aren't available to everyone. I've witnessed the barriers for participation in physical activity for women, particularly in my culture, which has been a drive for me to improve this issue."

Emily Hyde enjoys learning alongside classmates who one day will be colleagues. When she sees a need, she acts. As co-chair of the Graduate Nursing Students Association, Emily created a mentoring program for undergrads that will continue long after she graduates. And when the continuing education instructor saw a surge in patients struggling with addiction, she brought stakeholders together to educate about respectful care.

"I am so lucky to be part of a cohort that is diverse, supportive, encouraging and who genuinely wants to see others succeed. This supportive environment has allowed me to ask questions, take risks, learn and grow."

If you meet the academic admission criteria, but do not meet the English language proficiency requirements, we can help. The University of Manitoba can accept you on the condition that you successfully complete Level 5 of the Intensive Academic English Program (IAEP).

The IAEP prepares you for university study by providing you with the language skills necessary to succeed academically. Learn new vocabulary and how to write research papers, deliver academic presentations and more.

Our program features:

- Small classes averaging 12 students
- Dedicated student advising
- Multiple opportunities to transition to university
- Social, cultural and recreational events

Conditional admission to the University of Manitoba is available to students who meet the academic requirements pending successful completion of the IAEP.

Tuition: $4,400 per term
